Do you remember the Black Magic television commercials? (“Commercials” for all you nippers born after 1980 means “adverts”.) Just to refresh your memory, they used to feature a lithe young chap in unfeasibly ridiculous situations dressed in equally unfeasibly tight black trousers and a black polo neck sweater surreptitiously leaving boxes of Black Magic chocolates for young damsels to come across. It did occur to me that the distribution of Wightwash has a sort of parallel. Who are these unsung heroes that come unseen and leave Wightwash on you pub bars (and do they wear unfeasibly tight black trousers)? We’ve decided to have a leak and tell you all. To read WIGHTWASH DISTRIBUTORS EXPOSED turn to page 11.

Thank you, Gee!!

This issue of Wightwash will be the first for 5 years that has been produced without the assistance of the Paper Workshop and in particular Gee Wright. Gee was the instigator of the current format of Wightwash when it was re-launched in 1999. His patience, expertise and advice have been invaluable. Gee has decided to go and visit lots and lots of different countries. We hope you have a wonderful time, Gee. But speaking from experience, you won’t half miss a decent pint. Cheers mate! ## The Willis-Fleming Memorial

On a grassy knoll above Havenstreet this classy building dominates the local landscape. It is easily accessed by way of a public footpath but few seem to take advantage of the stunning views presented by the site. The climb is well worth while and for the curious, the interesting story of the building unfolds.

The Fleming family have long been associated with the Island. Thomas Fleming who was the son of a Newport wool merchant, rose in spectacular fashion to be Lord Chief Justice in 1650. He presided at the trial of Guy Fawkes. His descendants owned large estates in the Ryde area and on the mainland. Not many men have the distinction of having a pub named after them but he has two, The Fleming Arms in Binstead and another of the same name in Swaythling. The Binstead Inn not only bears the Fleming name, but its inn sign sports the Willis-Fleming coat of arms.

The inscriptions on the memorial pay tribute to the men of Binstead and Havensteet who gave their lives in the Great War. Mention in particular is made of Lieutenant Richard Willis-Fleming who was killed defending the Suez canal from Turkish forces. He died on the day after his twentieth birthday on 4th August 1916. The courtyard of the shrine also contains memorial tablets to other members of the Willis-Fleming family.

Rob Marshall

From Paul Mattick

For those of you who were wondering what happened to my final paragraph in the last issue, I must apologise. The reason - a picture was added to the page at the last minute, which in turn left you with only half of my final story. If you were on the edge of your seats here it is again...

The wife came down stairs the other day from cleaning my son's room. Under his bed she found a selection of S & M magazines that contained everything from rubber outfits to whips and chains. "What do we do?" she said, to which I replied, for heavens sake don't spank him!!

After a record-trading year to date Island Ales have recruited a new player to spearhead their expansion programme. Chris Mousley, who joined the company August 1st as Sales Director will work in tandem with Managing Director, Steve Minshull, in expanding the companies distribution base and increasing partnership programmes with customers and major/micro brewers. Steve says "With the solid foundation of 12 years of successful trading on the Island we are fully established as the Islands number one company in the supply of Beers and Soft drinks to the licensed trade and I am now able to put into operation the companies business growth and development plans which includes focusing on benefiting our loyal customer base both short term and long term". Chris, ably accompanied by Kevin Fisher on the Sales development side of the operation are key players in the attainment of long term growth and expansion for the company.

Stop press ...

Please watch out for Island Ales and the new offer on Real Ales....

Through Wightwash I'd like to mention a couple of the drinking establishments that I have been to this summer. This mainly applies to holidaymakers. In May I purchased a caravan. To get us geared up for next year I have visited a few campsites on the Island (next year we may go as far as the New Forest!) The two that stood out were Apuldurcombe near Wroxall, which had Goddards on over the bank holiday weekend. The only drawback was that they had no late licence meaning the bar closed at 10.30 pm on the Sunday. In June we went to Rookley Country Park; the facilities there were excellent. The entertainment was outstanding and to top it all, the bar is open to the public with three Real Ales to wet yer whistle.

The alterations have enabled Chris, Kate and their assistant manager Steve Chiverton to keep the old part of the pub as a proper public bar. The new extension can provide space for up to 82 diners who can enjoy some of the best views on the Island.

Readers of Wightwash will remember the battle fought by locals, councillors and CAMRA to get the Sun reopened and it is so encouraging to know that the pub has its future guaranteed.

Congratulations to Paul Moreton who has recently taken the helm at Harvey's in Newport, formerly called The Vine. Paul, who also runs the Mai Thai Restaurant 20 yards away tells me that although he has no plans for Real Ale at the moment, he may well (if enough of us grovel) stock it in the future.

Chris and Kate Cole must be heaving a sigh of relief now that the alterations have been completed to the Sun at Hulverstone. Within hours of the completion, the Sun played host to a wedding party with nearly 100 guests. A few days later it saw its first Beer Festival featuring 25 real ales and cider with even a bus load of Wightwash can reveal that work is soon to start on the Horse and Groom at Ningwood.

The start date to return the pub to its former glory will be at the beginning of October, finishing in time for a pre-Christmas opening. Work will include the unblocking of the windows at the front, moving the bar back to its former position, and opening a side entrance so that customers, including wheelchair users, can gain access from the car park.

an hotel in a superb spot. Talking of views the Waterfront really does deserve much more support and it is a great pity that their hours are sometimes restricted - there is nothing wrong with their products. Finally to the Fat Cat which can be very busy and with new bedrooms up and running it could get better (or worse if too many more want to use the bar?!) It has to be worth a visit if only to taste

The Prince of Wales remains a good old beer house and with a recent award we hope to see Chris and Wendy there for a while yet. The Highdown appears to fit the description of one of the ten pubs listed for sale with Daltons. It certainly looks smarter and will always fill a need from walkers and others who like a quieter pub. As for the Vine it is steady as she goes with a good trade in a prime position and excellent beer - not much Gales left on the Island. I always have a sneaking admiration for the Royal Standard which retains its older small country town hotel atmosphere and Courage still has a following. The Red Lion is always the Red Lion - not always easy to get a table (especially when a booking is lost!) That particular party enjoyed their meal at Dimbola Lodge. The Albion enjoys a good reputation as whatever is on offer from the Orkneys to Ventnor and it could easily become addictive whatever it is. Jay somehow manages to put in a stint in the bar in between treading the boards - he is becoming quite popular on the stage in West Wight. I make no apology for little mention of beer except to say that it is always interesting and of good quality. The drinkers can make their own decisions - I am perhaps only an observer though I do enjoy a good pint!

MURMURINGS FROM WEST WIGHT

As more of an occasional visitor to local watering holes I can only go on brief chats and the odd rumour when it comes to news. Having said that I am kept fairly well in the picture at the Broadway, the Fat Cat and the Prince so here are a few snippets under a different heading:

THEY SAY generally that trade has not been particularly good but reasonable given the slow start to the season and its seemingly shorter stay with us as the years go by. The New Inn Shalfleet seems to be doing very well with its smoking ban and on some evenings is very full. I am glad to hear that the Horse and Groom at Ningwood will open again this winter. Yarmouth is usually busy but at around 2pm on Car-

“Dorset brewer Hall & Woodhouse (Badgers) has announced plans to develop a new brewery at its Blandford St Mary site. The existing 100-year old brewery will be decommissioned, with plans for a residential development that would preserve the Victorian buildings. In its place, the brewer of the Badger beer range plans a new space-age brewery, to be built from scratch on an area of the Blandford site freed up by H&W's exit from soft drinks production. H&W sold its soft drinks arm, which produced the Panda and Popzone ranges, to Vimto owner Nichols in January.”

Ventnor Brewery are expanding their off sales and hope to encourage those drinkers that can't always get down to the pub to sample the delights of Ventnor Beers. Capitalising on their more unusual products such as Sandrock Smoked Beer and Ventnor Oyster Stout, their on-line shop is now selling all over Europe and with next day deliveries guaranteed to anywhere in the UK, what a great idea for a present. The now famous Bestival has provided both Baker boys with a chance to indulge in their own particular field: Xavier with his brewing expertise and Airon with his experience in the field of music promotion. The ale brewed (with the assistance of Radio One DJ Rob D Bank) specifically for the Bestival - BestivAle is now available nationally through the Wetherspoon chain.

Yates' Brewery

The news from an extremely busy Yates' Brewery is that for the first time in 5 years of brewing, they ran out of beer! David Snr. tells Wightwash that he has added a new permanent beer to his stock - Yates' Blonde 4.5% a light and very hoppy ale brewed with Fuggles hops, available at the Inn at St Lawrence, the White Lion, Niton and various other Island pubs. Thanks to an exchange deal that David has pulled off with Crouch Vale Breweries, you will be able to find "Brewers Gold" the Champion Beer of Britain in Isle of Wight pubs. The tiny Essex brewery can only produce 60 barrels of beer a week so they have been very selective with their outlets and in fact, have been unable to supply any new wholesalers. David's deal means that in

I am most obliged to Ray Jolliffe our Kiwi Kaulkhead Korrespondent for drawing my attention to a book called Songs of the Soil. It is a collection of Isle of Wight songs collected by Percy G Stone of Merston and published by the County Press in 1933. Here's a bit of one from 1830 called:

How They Ran the First Fox in the Wight

Passon Fenwick o' Brook a kep' a darg vox
On a chain i' his yard at the rear;
Where a got en, an' how, I niver yet heerd,
All thet I knows— he wuz theer.

To Passon cum hrunnin' one vine zummer day,
As a moistedned a's clay on the laan,
A's zervant man Zam we' the ter'ble news -
'Pleaze zur, measter Reynolds be gaan.

Last they 'greed wor to gether an' dresh en out vair.
Zo us met at the "Dragon" an' dined—
Varmer Day, Zquire Thetcher an' Jemmy Scovell,
An' a mort more bezaide I doan't mind

Zaays Zquire, a zetten oop top I' the cheer,
As a's knife on the table a knocks, -
"My hounds they'm be stoutish at hrunning a hare,
I hreckon they'll zhow to a vox.

The story of the chase unfolds with references to Chillerton, Atherfield, Kingston and many other Island places. The fox, of course gets his up and commence and the day finishes with a celebratory dinner with "Zherry an' poort " and "prime old October brewed ale". Here's the last verse:

Charge your glasses—no 'heel taps' we make it our boast;
In the health I'm proposing to-night—
Squire Thatcher of Wackland, I give as the toast,
Who ran the first fox in the Wight.

After a long search, I eventually found a copy of Songs of the Soil in the County Reference Library in Newport. I would be very interested to hear from anyone who could supply the tunes for these songs as the book only contains lyrics.

If you have a copy of Songs of the Soil, look after it. It is VERY, VERY RARE!

On to Mallaig where another ferry will transport you to Skye and another new brewery! If you only visit one pub on Skye make sure it's The Sligachan. Set at the head of a sea loch and with the 12 Munros of the Cuillins as neighbours it has a spectacular setting. Known locally as The Sliggy, it's a great pub with a good selection of ales, and now a brewery as well!

The Cuillin Brewery nestles between the hotel and the bar; the brewer is Eric Jones, originally from Bolton but more recently brewing for the now rival Isle of Skye Brewery over on the island's west coast.

Cuillins current brews are "Eagle Bitter" at 3.9%, a light aromatic drink, and "Skye Bitter" 4.1%. This is darker, smooth and malty. Bottling is done by the Hebridean Brewery in Stornaway ( whose "Hebridean Clansman" was also available at The Sliggy).

Good beers, good pubs and marvellous scenery. But if you're thinking of going next year, stub your fag out before you leave. There will be a total smoking ban beyond Carlisle from March 2006.

Brickfield Horse Centre with power provided by a shire horse. There will be two resulting ciders: Brickfield Cider and Red Squirrel Cider. If you would like to watch the process, it will take place on 22nd, 23rd and 24th October. There will be a cider bar on the Saturday. Card carrying CAMRA members will get free entry and discount at the bar.

The Buddle Inn, Niton

We are pleased to report that the Buddle has had a bumper season under new landlord and landlady, John and Fiona Page.

John originally comes from London and has a background in engineering. He moved to the Isle of Wight 25 years ago where he met Island girl Fiona. About 8 years ago they took their first pub The Cornish Arms in St Meryn, Cornwall followed by the Pheasant Inn, near Wookey in Somerset. Eventually the lure of the Isle of Wight got the better of them, and on 18th April this year they moved back to the Island and took over the historic Buddle Inn. (The Buddle is one of the Island's earliest hostelries, and for many years was also run as a farm. It was granted its first license in 1850.)

John is a real ale enthusiast and ensures that there are always plenty of good real ales on offer (plus one real cider). Yates' Buddle Best is frequently available as well as offerings from Goddards and Ventnor Brewery.

Food is available every lunchtime and 6 – 9 in the evenings. By the end of September there will be a new a la carte menu.

Live music is another feature of the Buddle. There are Jazz Nights, regular Friday Folk Nights with Allan Ramsdale-Capper and every Sunday lunchtime you can hear Brad Thomas play the piano.

Many an Islander over a certain age will remember being brought to see the mini model village in front of the pub. Sadly, this has become rather neglected over the years but John and Fiona are hoping that with a little help from the locals, it will soon be restored to its former glory.

If you fancy a cosy pint as the winter evenings draw in, the Buddle will have real open fires to warm you up (and if that doesn't work, ask about the hot "egg flip"! ). John and Fiona would like to point out that the Buddle is a "dog-friendly" pub.

Across the harbour is the other pub in Tobermory, which should not be missed. The Mishnish is in the large yellow painted waterfront building near the ferry terminal. Busy and atmospheric it has lots of drinking areas, accommodation, food and two handpumps. Whilst we were there Waggledance and Deuchars were available.

Leaving Mull the small 18 car ferry takes you in 30 minutes across the Sound of Mull to the remote and isolated Ardnamurchan (Ard-nah-murr-c'n) Peninsula, the most westerly part of Great Britain. Here settlements are few and handpumps fewer. In fact we only found one; at the friendly Ben View Hotel just outside Strontian. Here "Three Sisters" 4.2% from the Atlas Brewery in Kinlochleven was on offer.

What's the story in Balamory?.....

A new brewery!

Readers with young children will probably be familiar with Balamory, the Scottish seaside village in the TV programmes. You may be aware that it is a real place, Tobermory on the Isle of Mull; now it has real ale as well!

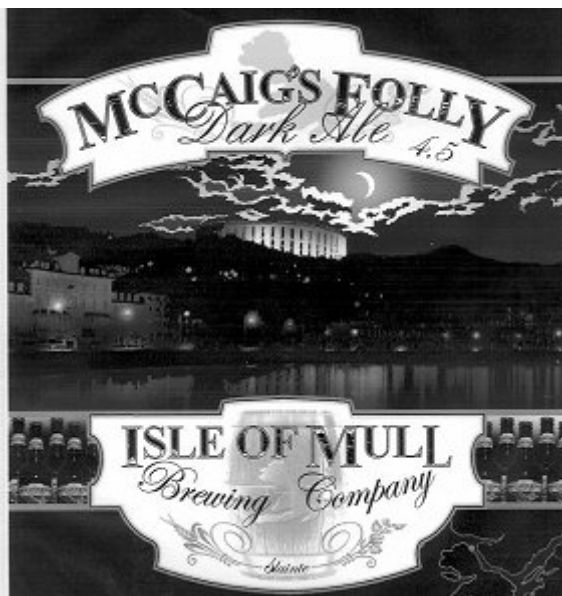

Don't mention it in front of the children, but the village has acquired its own brewery. It's in an ideal location too, overlooking the harbour and sandwiched between the Tobermory Distillery and MacCochan's Bar.

The small distillery, squashed between the cliffs and the harbourside has a shop and visitor centre. Also tours are arranged with the opportunity to sample the interesting single malts crafted here.

Next door is the new brewery set up by The Isle of Mull Brewing Company, opened for business in May this year, at which time they were producing two ales. The stronger "Golden Galleon" at 5.5% is a pale and powerful ale named after the Spanish ship which blew up in mysterious circumstances in Tobermory harbour in 1588.

The weaker beer, "McCaig's Folly" 4.2% is a darkish bitter but with a light taste. As well as selling locally it is hoped to market the beers on the mainland; the folly in the name is the circular monument overlooking the nearby town of Oban.

Next door again is the lively and modern MacCochan's Bar, owned by the brewery, where both ales can be sampled.

The Rookley Inn, Rookley Country Park

The new man in charge here is Steve Cunningham.

Up until very recently Steve was a London Cabbie. But coping with what Steve refers to as the Rat Race, became more and more unattractive. As a regular visitor to the Island to stay with his sister, Steve realised that life is so much better here on the Island and one day decided to emigrate.

Steve began work on the Island as a barman/cellarman at the Rookley Inn under the guidance of the then landlord Jeff Ledicott.

he is doing to maintain the Rookley Inn's fine reputation for Real Ale. There is always a good choice of beers and always served up in cracking condition AND AT THE RIGHT TEMPERATURE!! (Sorry, the Wightwash hobby horse is showing.)

Steve puts his success down to a lifelong interest in pubs and a good teacher.

Here we see Steve during the recent Rookley Inn Festival of Beers (12 Real Ales all @ £2 a pint) see what you missed!

EXPOSED

(In this series we will tell you all about the intrepid band of volunteers that ensure that Wightwash appears on your bar)

Gerry Hallett

The first one to come under the spotlight is our main man, Gerry Hallett. Gerry is the chap who collects Wightwash from the printer and distributes it to the other distributors. He also has his own round of pubs in central Wight including Arreton, Godshill and Rookley.

Gerry moved to the Island 30 years ago and before becoming a "man of leisure" he worked for Wadhams in Newport and latterly the Chequers Inn.

His hobbies include walking and photography. Gerry's photographs appear on several pub websites (most recently the Yarbridge Inn) and it is Gerry who is responsible for devising the Chequers Inn "Park and Walk" series of walks. To have a look at Gerry's handiwork log on to www.yarbridgeinn.co.uk or www.chequersinn-iow.co.uk and click on "Walks". If you would like to have some pub walks devised around your pub or some photographs taken, Gerry would be only too pleased to discuss it over a pint. You can contact Gerry via Wightwash (editor@wightwash.org.uk or Tel: 721557).
